EAGLE VIEW TECHNOLOGIES, INC.,

CASE NO. C12-1913-RSM

Plaintiff,

ORDER ON PLAINTIFF'S MOTION
TO FILE SUPPLEMENTAL

XACTWARE SOLUTIONS, INC.,

Defendant.

INTRODUCTION

This matter comes before the Court upon Plaintiff's Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d) Motion for Leave to File a Supplemental Complaint setting forth Roof InSight allegations. Dkt. # 143. For the reasons set forth below, Plaintiff's motion is DENIED.

BACKGROUND

Eagle View Technologies, Inc. (“Eagle View”) provides aerial roof measurement services, and Xactware Solutions, Inc. (“Xactware”) provides computer software to professionals in the insurance and construction industries involved in estimating building and repair costs. In November 2008, Eagle View and Xactware entered into an integration agreement (“Agreement”) whereby Xactware granted Eagle View certain limited rights to import data from Eagle View’s customers through Xactware’s network. In January 2011, the parties amended certain

1 provisions, which among other things contain an automatic renewal provision that required
2 written notice of non-renewal by September 5, 2012. After unsuccessful attempts at further 3 negotiations, Eagle View filed for declaratory and injunctive relief on October 12, 2012, seeking 4 to prevent Xactware from prematurely terminating the Agreement on the grounds that it 5 automatically renewed for another 48 months. See Dkt. # 1.

6 Eagle View now seeks leave to update its form of declaratory relief and supplement a 7 breach claim with the information obtained at the close of discovery. Dkt. # 143, p. 5. Eagle
8 View alleges that Xactware materially breached the Agreement by developing and piloting a 9 product called Roof InSight, which was created to compete directly with Eagle View. Id. at 2.
10 Eagle View states that the facts underlying the violation did not arise until June 2013, when 11 Xactware began advertising its product on its website. Id. at 5. Xactware opposes the motion, 12 arguing that Eagle View is asserting a new and distinct claim rather than supplementing an 13 existing claim and that it should be denied for undue delay, bad faith, prejudice and futility.

14 DISCUSSION

15 Rule 15(d) provides that “[o]n motion and reasonable notice, the court may, on just 16 terms, permit a party to serve a supplemental pleading setting out any transaction, occurrence, or 17 event that happened after the date of the pleading to be supplemented.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(d).
18 The rule applies when a party seeks to file additional causes of action based on facts that did not 19 exist when the original complaint was filed. See Cabrera v. City of Huntington Park, 159 F.3d 20 374, 382 (9th Cir. 1998) (“Rule 15(d) permits the filing of a supplemental pleading which 21 introduces a cause of action not alleged in the original complaint and not in existence when the 22 original complaint was filed.”) (quotation omitted). The purpose of this provision is to “promote 23 as complete an adjudication of the dispute between the parties as possible.” 6A Charles Alan

1 Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 1504 (2d ed. 1990). Thus, the rule is “intended
 2 to give district courts broad discretion in allowing supplemental pleadings.” Keith v. Volpe, 858 3 F.2d 467, 473 (9th Cir. 1988). However, “[w]hile leave to permit supplemental pleading is 4 ‘favored,’ it cannot be used to introduce a ‘separate, distinct and new cause of action.’” Planned 5 Parenthood of S. Ariz. v. Neely, 130 F.3d 400, 402 (9th Cir. 1997). The threshold inquiry is 6 whether some relationship exists between the newly alleged matters and the subject of the 7 original action, although they need not all arise out of the same transaction. Keith, 858 F.2d at 8 474; see also Weeks v. New York State (Div. of Parole), 273 F.3d 76, 88 (2d Cir. 2001)
 9 (considering whether “the supplemental facts connect [the supplemental pleading] to the original 10 pleading”). The court may still deny the motion for undue delay, bad faith, undue prejudice to 11 the opposing party, or futility. See Keith, 858 F.2d at 475.

12 A. Separate and Distinct Claim

13 Xactware argues that Eagle View’s claim for breach is a separate and distinct claim 14 because the original complaint specifies breach of contract only in the context of anticipatory 15 wrongful termination, which was rendered moot by the preliminary injunction order keeping the 16 Agreement in place. Dkt. # 182, p. 3. However, Xactware does not dispute that there is some 17 relationship that exists between the original complaint and the proposed supplement, as they both 18 pertain to the parties’ Agreement and relationship thereto. Eagle View is seeking to supplement 19 a breach claim that has unfolded during the course of this litigation against the sole, existing 20 defendant in the matter. Thus, the Court finds there is a sufficient connection between the claims 21 here and Eagle View’s proposed supplement is not a separate and distinct claim.

22 B. Undue Delay

23 Eagle View filed its initial complaint on October 29, 2012. On August 1, 2013, almost 24 nine months after the initial complaint, Eagle View seeks to supplement. Eagle View claims it

1 was only after Xactware updated its website in late June 2013 that Eagle View learned of its 2 plans to compete using Roof InSight. Dkt. # 143 at 5. By the time Eagle View filed its motion
 3 to supplement, the parties had less than two months before the trial.<sup>1</sup> Xactware argues that Eagle 4 View acknowledged its awareness of Roof InSight as early as May 7, 2013, had all the 5 information to depose on the matter, but failed to supplement in earlier in June or July. Dkt. #
 6 184, p. 13. Eagle View argues that it is not seeking a trial continuance or additional discovery, 7 and there will be no undue delay on adjudication of the matter. Dkt. # 143 at 5.

8       However, Eagle View does not deny that the landscape of this litigation has already been 9 shaped on its original complaint for relief based solely on the issue of the Agreement's automatic 10 renewal. Allowing Eagle View to now modify its claim for declaratory relief and supplement 11 with a material breach claim will cause undue delay, particularly since Xactware must seek a 12 continuance to pursue any additional discovery and file dispositive motions related to the new 13 claims. Further, Eagle View's own summary judgment motion on its original claim for 14 declaratory relief (Dkt. # 123) is currently pending before the Court. See Roberts v. Ariz. Bd. of 15 Regents, 661 F.2d 796 (9th Cir. 1981) (district court did not abuse its discretion when it denied 16 motion to amend when the issue was raised at the eleventh hour, after discovery was virtually 17 complete and there was a pending summary judgment motion). The Court finds there is undue 18 delay, but in order to deny leave to amend or supplement a pleading, there must be bad faith or 19 undue prejudice found. United States v. Webb, 655 F. 2d 977, 980 (9th Cir. 1981) (citing Howey 20 v. United States, 481 F.2d 1187, 1191 (9th Cir. 1973)).

22       <sup>1</sup> The trial on this matter was originally scheduled for October 15, 2013 when Eagle View 23 filed the motion. Dkt. # 67. The trial was later rescheduled to January 13, 2014. Dkt. # 213.
 24 Despite the extension of time before trial, discovery was completed on June 17, 2013 and the deadline to file any dispositive motions with the Court passed on July 17, 2013.

1     C. Bad Faith

2           Xactware argues that Eagle View's delay in supplementing its complaint was made in 3 bad faith because it failed to supplement its breach claim on another competing product called 4 Aerial Sketch, which was revealed in the early stages of litigation. Dkt. # 184 at 9-10, 12. Eagle
 5 View submits evidence that the decision to not supplement its complaint on Aerial Sketch was a
 6 business decision based on Xactware's own testimony that it was not a directly competing 7 product. Dkt. # 194 at 5 n. 5; Dkt. # 195, Escobar Dec. ¶¶ 3-5. Eagle View further points that it
 8 was Xactware that acted in bad faith by actively pursuing Eagle View customers with Roof
 9 InSight after the relevant court deadlines passed. Dkt. # 194 at 7. Given the parties' competing 10 allegations, there is insufficient evidence to conclude that Eagle View brought this motion in bad 11 faith.

12     D. Undue Prejudice

13           Since leave to amend or supplement a complaint is liberally granted, the finding of undue 14 prejudice must be obvious prejudice to the opposing party. E.g. Waters v. Weyerhaeuser Mortg. Co., 582 F.2d 503, 507 (9th Cir. 1978) (finding district court did not abuse its discretion in 15 denying leave to supplement a complaint where the moving party sought to litigate an issue that 16 was previously conceded). There is no undue prejudice found if an added claim would require 17 little additional discovery, because most of the information would be available in the opposing 18 party's own files. LaSalvia v. United Dairymen of Ariz., 804 F.2d 1113, 1119 (9th Cir. 1986).
 19 Eagle View argues that its supplemental complaint would preserve the status quo between the 20 parties, requiring no further discovery as Xactware's own business plans are within its 21 possession. Dkt. # 143 at 5. Xactware disagrees, arguing that Eagle View's supplement would 22 unfairly prejudice its "due process rights to prepare for a trial of the newly alleged claim, 23 including discovery, third-party discovery and the right to move against the merits of the new

1 claim.” Dkt. # 184 at 6. Xactware must also have the opportunity to prepare a defense to the 2 claim and rebut the damages analysis that would arise from such a claim. Id. at 6-7.

3 The Court finds there are a number of factors present that indicate Xactware would suffer
4 undue prejudice from the supplemental complaint. First, while it is true that Xactware has access 5 to its own business plans, it cannot be limited to solely the documents currently in possession to 6 prepare an adequate defense. Money damages are not implicit in Eagle View’s original 7 complaint and the alleged breach involves Xactware’s dealings with third parties, including 8 existing and prospective Eagle View customers. See Texaco, Inc. v. Ponsoldt, 939 F.2d 794, 9 798-99 (9th Cir. 1991) (affirming denial of district court’s denial of leave to amend when 10 discovery had concluded, only four and a half months remained until trial, and the plaintiff 11 sought to newly allege money damages for breach when the original complaint requested only 12 specific performance and declaratory relief). Second, the parties have only two months 13 remaining until trial. See Kaplan v. Rose, 49 F.3d 1363, 1370 (9th Cir. 1994) (affirming district 14 court’s denial of a motion to amend a complaint, finding that prejudice would result when “trial 15 was only two months away, and discovery was completed.”). Although Eagle View denies any 16 modification to the current schedule, the dates must be extended to allow for additional 17 discovery and dispositive motions regarding Eagle View’s new claims. Lockheed Martin Corp.
18 v. Network Solutions, Inc., 194 F.3d 980, 986 (9th Cir. 1999) (stating that “[a] need to reopen
19 discovery and therefore delay the proceedings supports a district court’s finding of prejudice
20 from a delayed motion to amend...”). Third, Eagle View has a pending summary judgment
21 motion on its claim for declaratory relief regarding the Agreement’s automatic renewal
22 provision. In requesting to “update” the form of declaratory relief, it is unclear whether Eagle 23 View is simply supplementing an additional declaratory judgment claim, or requesting to amend

1 its existing one. See Holmberg v. Vail, No. 11-5449 BHS/KLS, 2012 WL 3144929, at *2 (W.D.
 2 Wash. Aug. 1, 2012) (finding that a supplement would cause undue prejudice when the lawsuit 3 was narrowed to one claim and there was a pending motion for summary judgment on the 4 merits).

5 E. Futility

6 Futility of amendment can alone justify the denial of a motion for leave to amend or 7 supplement. See Bonin v. Calderon, 59 F.3d 815, 845 (9th Cir. 1995). A proposed amendment 8 is futile “if no set of facts can be proved under the amendment to the pleadings that would 9 constitute a valid and sufficient claim or defense.” Miller v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc., 845 F.2d 209, 10 214 (9th Cir. 1988). If a proposed amended complaint cannot withstand a motion to dismiss, it 11 should be denied as futile.

12 Xactware argues that Eagle View’s Roof InSight allegations are futile because they are 13 “contrary to multiple judicial admissions that contradict it.” Dkt. # 184 at 13. In other words, it
 14 claims Eagle View’s interpretation of the Agreement’s competition clause is counter to its own
 15 admissions made in earlier representations regarding Aerial Sketch and its own competitive
 16 products. Dkt. # 184 at 7-12. Eagle View distinguishes its Roof InSight allegations with its own 17 interpretation of the Agreement’s competition clause. Since the futility argument largely 18 involves factual determinations, the Court need not decide them on a motion to supplement.
 19 Further, the fact-intensive inquiry on the issue alone would survive a motion to dismiss.

20 In sum, Eagle View’s proposed supplement is not a separate and distinct claim, nor 21 would the amendment be futile. However, the Court finds that supplementation at this stage in 22 the litigation will cause undue delay and result in undue prejudice to Xactware. For the reasons
 23 above, Eagle View’s motion is DENIED.
